Assistant In
Department of Environmental and Global Health

The Department of Environmental and Global Health (EGH) in the College of Public Health and Health Professions (PHHP) invites applications for an Assistant In faculty position to serve as the coordinator/administrator for all research and teaching/training activities in Haiti conducted by PHHP, the Emerging Pathogens Institute (EPI), and the College of Medicine (COM). This includes administrative oversight and coordination of research grants/activities funded by NIH, Department of Defense, the European Union, the Gates Foundation, etc. as well as coordination of student travel to and activities in Haiti. The position will be based in the United States but will require frequent, extended travel to Haiti. The ideal candidate for this position will have a master’s degree, and extensive experience working in developing world settings; prior experience working in Haiti would be advantageous. Fluency in French and/or Haitian Creole is essential for the position. This is a full-time (1.0 FTE), 12-month, non-tenure accruing position, with an open start date.
