

ASSISTANT OR ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR
DEPARTMENT OF SPEECH, LANGUAGE, AND HEARING SCIENCES

The Department of Speech, Language, and Hearing Sciences (SLHS) at the University of Florida invites applications for a faculty position in Audiology. Candidates will be considered at the Assistant and Associate Professor level. This is a full-time (1.0 FTE) 12-month, tenured or tenure-track faculty position. Individuals with expertise in any area of diagnostic or rehabilitative audiology are encouraged to apply, but those with interests in electrophysiology or cochlear implants will be given special consideration. The successful candidate must have a program of research in the candidate's area of primary interest that is funded or would be highly competitive for future funding. Applicants must possess a PhD in Audiology or Hearing Science. Applicants holding a PhD-AuD will be given preference.

SLHS is housed within the College of Public Health and Health Professions and is well integrated within the Health Science Center, providing a wealth of opportunities for scholarly collaborations. We are a large department with more than 40 academic and clinical faculty members addressing a multi-faceted mission that encompasses education, clinical service, and research. We just obtained academic accreditation that continues for eight years. The Health Science Center is one of the largest in the nation, with six separate colleges.

The University of Florida is a comprehensive doctoral research-extensive university that includes a full range of academic departments and programs (www.ufl.edu). It has a long history of established programs in international education, research and service and is one of only 17 public, land-grant universities that belong to the Association of American Universities. UF is the state's oldest and most comprehensive university and is among the nation's most academically diverse public higher education institutions. It regularly has more than $700 million in research dollars.
